

WA Transport and Logistics Workforce Gauge

You have been sent this email as a key stakeholder in Transport and Logistics.

Are you having trouble recruiting people with the right skills for the job? Do you spend a lot of time and money training your workers only to have them leave? Do you feel your message is not getting through to the people who make decisions in government?

Then this is your chance to have your say.

The Logistics Training Council has been asked by the Department of Training and Workforce Development and the Department of Transport to identify workforce issues and find out what your business practices are, especially in the area of human resources. This will allow business, industry and government to make informed decisions about attracting and retaining a skilled workforce, leading to growth within the Transport and Logistics (T&L) industries.

The information gathered in this survey will assist you in developing better strategies for engaging your workers and allow government to focus their spending on more appropriate training and resource allocation. It will also give the T&L industry an opportunity to plan for future growth through the WA Transport and Logistics Workforce Advisory Group (TLWAG), who will identify strategies and solutions that are responsive to the future needs and identify trends.

The results will also inform the WA Logistics Industries Workforce Development Plan, used by the Department of Training and Workforce Development to give insight into industry's needs and allow for better input into the State workforce Development Plan, Skilling WA.

Please follow the link below to the survey and complete by 23 September 2011. We apologise if you receive this survey more than once. We are trying to ensure that all stakeholders are given the opportunity to provide valuable input.

<http://www.surveymonkey.com/s/VGL8PTM>

Once again we thank you for taking the time to complete this important survey, and we look forward to sharing the results with you.